

[The Original Flavour of Saint John] B E C O M E A J U D G E !

The foghorn blows in the distance and the early evening chill of this Port City sets in. Back from the market, you carry sacks of wheat flour, sugar and salt into the comfortable smoky kitchen. The fire in the wood stove is crackling and a broth stew is thickening, brewing a bouquet of thyme, basil, cumin and sage in the steam. Molasses cookies are baking and the sweet cinnamon, clove and nutmeg aromas mingle, tickling your senses. It is 1785. You are hungry, your taste buds are sharp.

‘The Original Flavour of Saint John’ is in the air!
